85-foot drilling rig collapses and catches fire in Miami

At least four people were injured after an 85-foot drilling rig collapsed and caught fire near downtown Miami on Monday, September 14.

Florida Climate Week returns Oct. 5-11 to unite residents in addressing the state's most pressing climate challenges and promoting sustainable solutions.

During the week, Floridians can participate in a variety of free, virtual and in-person events hosted by local nonprofits, businesses and educational institutions. One such event will take place in Palm Beach County, where the ANGARI Foundation will host an interactive experience at the Safe Harbor North Palm Beach Marina.

Hands-on science for all ages

On Oct. 8, from 4 to 7:30 p.m., attendees can meet the ANGARI team and explore the foundation's 65-foot research vessel, R/V ANGARI. The vessel is used for marine research on sharks, sea turtles, coral reefs and sargassum. Visitors will have the opportunity to learn how to measure a shark, study coral reefs and operate a research vessel. After the tour, guests can decorate biodegradable Lagoon Drift cards and learn about local waterways. The event will also feature live music and a food truck.

Florida Climate Week returns with hands-on marine science

Florida Climate Week returns Oct. 5 to 11 with events like a research vessel tour to promote sustainable solutions.

Raising awareness and driving solutions

Organized by VoLo Foundation, Florida Climate Week aims to raise awareness, share knowledge and drive practical solutions for a sustainable and resilient future. The program emphasizes the importance of collective action and community engagement in combating climate change.

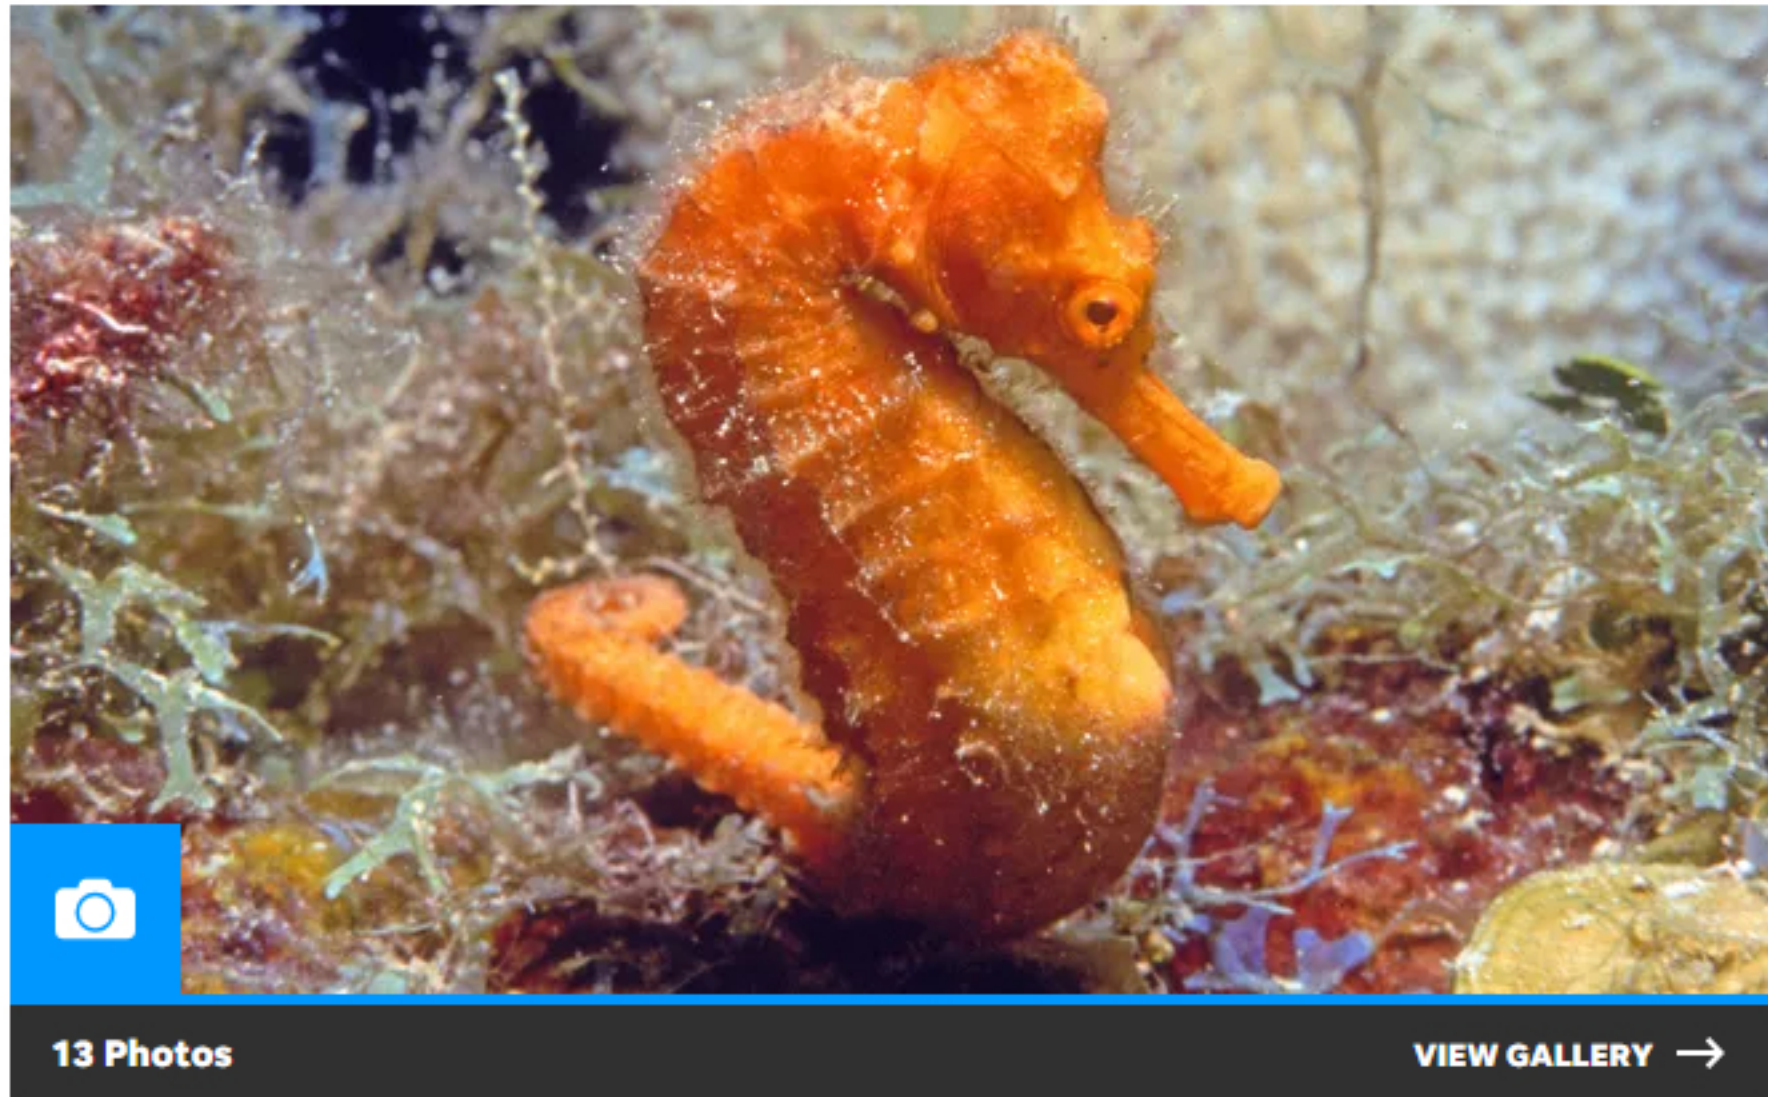

"Florida Climate Week is an initiative to raise awareness, share knowledge and drive practical solutions for a sustainable and resilient future for Florida," according to the announcement. "The weeklong program underscores the importance of collective action and community engagement in combating climate change."

VoLo Foundation is a private nonprofit organization with a mission to accelerate change and global impact by supporting science-based climate solutions, enhancing education and improving health.

ANGARI Foundation, based in West Palm Beach, is dedicated to creating a global community interested in marine and environmental sciences. The foundation supports research initiatives that foster trust and dialogue between scientists and the public. ANGARI uses technology, film and other media to raise awareness and strengthen science education. Many of its initiatives involve the R/V ANGARI, which serves as a research and education platform.
